While many people facing hair fall or baldness are opting hair transplant technique as a solution, they still lack knowledge and awareness about all the techniques of hair transplantation. Apart from FUE and FUT, there is another technique called PRP (Platelet-Rich-Plasma) therapy which is also widely used to combat various hair problems. Well, you might be wondering what the concept of PRP is. Basically, PRP therapy involves using patient's blood itself and injecting it into required scalp area.

Yes! In Platelet-Rich Plasma method, one's blood is withdrawn first and then processed so as to filter plasma along with the platelets. After centrifugation of blood, the collected platelet-rich-plasma cells are then injected into scalp that is facing a receding hairline or is affected by hair loss. Well, the reason behind injecting plasma into scalp is very clear i.e. PRP cells are loaded with vital proteins that turn out to be helpful in tissue generation and further tend to enhance natural hair growth.

PRP is mostly chosen by women facing alopecia or any type of hair loss. Also, men who are diagnosed with androgenetic alopecia also go for this technique. It is a very easy-to-go process and is done in more than four sittings so as to get the best results. However, people who are completely bald should not opt this process as it does not help them grow new hair but only stimulates the natural hair growth process.

So, before deciding on any method, have a word with a known hair transplant specialist like Dr. Siddharth whose team could suggest you the right technique as per your hair condition.
